GNAC News & Notes

TITLE SHOWDOWN IN BELLINGHAM: The two top teams from start to finish this season in the GNAC will play a high-stakes match in Bellingham on Thursday.

Western Washington will host Northwest Nazarene in the team's second meeting of the season. The two teams have not played since the second GNAC match of the season, one that the Nighthawks won in four sets. It also happens to be the last time that the Vikings lost.

With a win over NNU on Thursday, Western Washington will claim the GNAC championship outright, its first since 2013, and the league automatic qualifier to the NCAA Division II National Tournament. A win by the Nighthawks leaves the door open. Should the two teams tie at the top of the standings, the Nighthawks and Vikings would be co-champions with NNU claiming the NCAA automatic berth.

Western Washington has done nothing but improve over the last 16 matches. The Vikings enter the week leading the league in kills and digs and are second in hitting percentage, assists and blocks. They are ranked in the Division II top-30 in each category, topped by a No. 3 ranking with an average of 2.76 blocks per set.

Northwest Nazarene has lost twice since seeing the Vikings back on Sept. 16, but continue to play solid volleyball. The Nighthawks (who have even changed nicknames since last playing the Vikings) lead the GNAC in hitting percentage, opponent hitting percentage and assists and are second in kills. Like WWU, Northwest Nazarene is in the Division II top-30 in each category.

GNAC FLAVOR IN WEST REGION POLL: The GNAC continues to have four teams in the NCAA Division II West Region Rankings. The top three teams did not change position as Northwest Nazarene stayed at No. 2, Western Washington stayed at No. 3 and Central Washington stayed at No. 6. Alaska Anchorage dropped one spot to No. 9. The newest rankings will be released on Wednesday. The poll rankings at the end of the regular season will determine selection to the NCAA Division II National Tournament.
